

Because of you, girls at Jesse's House are changing the direction of their lives. We see it every day, and we want to share a few of those stories with you.

A Complete Turnaround

One girl has been with us for three and a half months. When she arrived, all she wanted to know was how quickly she could leave Jesse's House. Since then, she has made a complete 180. She is working hard in school and is on track to graduate a year and a half early. She also plans to continue living here after graduation while she attends college.

If this sounds familiar, it is because it is almost the same as a story we shared two years ago. We never get tired of seeing this kind of turnaround.

Using Her Independence Well

Another one of our high school seniors is learning to own her independence in a way that helps her grow instead of holding her back. She is learning whose guidance to trust—following good advice and letting go of the voices that kept her stuck in old patterns.

It may not sound as dramatic as the first story, but the change in her is dramatic. Good things follow this kind of growth.

A Leader in the Making

Our last story is unlike any you have heard before because nothing like it has happened here before. One of our girls started an advocacy club at her high school. She found a teacher to sponsor it, marketed it to her peers, invited other students to join, and created activities that get members talking and sharing ideas.

Her goal is to turn those ideas into real steps students can take to advocate for people in the wider community.

There's no doubt these girls are doing the hard work, but you're walking alongside them and helping make it possible. However it is that you walk with them, whether through financial gifts, prayer, silently cheering them on, or all of the above, you help give them a safe home, steady support, and people who believe in them.

Thank you for being part of their stories and for helping make hope, resilience, and new beginnings possible.
